Vicar and Gurate's Musings

and any other information we found interesting, funny or a need to share!

Vicar's Musings

I've been wondering what to muse about this week....the latest news from the Diocese? A book I've been reading? The church during lockdown and questions to be asked before we can go back? How life may be different? Or I finally decided to share some of my time out with my camera. They say you should never work with animals but I live with three and the past week Bella has had a cone because she's been spayed. As you can see she looks really happy about the cone and that is only one of the looks we've had from her.

Pepper bless him didn't recognise his own sister at first and hissed at her-he was completely flummoxed by this new creature with a cone on her head and didn't know how to treat her at all. He wasn't impressed with mums walking frame either!

Rosie on the other hand continue to show love to all—however whenever mum wanted

Rosie decided she wasn't going to-whilst this was funny to watch at first in the end a doggy biscuit was needed to tempt her to move

Animals to me show how we all react to change and the new environments we find ourselves in. We can be grumpy and pull face and moan, hiss and spit or become immovable.

The church is known for not wanting or not embracing change and yet with the daily phone line, WhatsApp groups, services streamed online we've adapted and from what I've heard I believe we're doing it well. Not every church is streaming services or creating prayer books but we're sharing our resources and pulling together. We're helping the community through prayer and joining support groups. We've adapted to a situation none of us ever dreamed of.

Whatever you think about clapping for the NHS or putting rainbows in your window and there's now a debate about how long that will continue—it is wonderful to see so many rainbows about Broadway including on this sheep—I wonder have you spotted it when out walking?

Our own doctors surgery have been amazing in these unprecedented times and all the keyworkers who help us and our society to keep going the best we can. We've all probably had to learn a bit a of patience and I'm loving the slowed down pace of life and fewer cars. These last couple of days with more traffic on the roads has seemed rather odd.

When I've had time I've loved getting out and seeing the wildlife and flowers that grow around our local area—we are so lucky to live in such a wonderful area where we are in the middle of no where in minutes. As you may be able to tell I've decided to share some of the images with you.. Feel lucky you aren't on Facebook or Instagram (I've uploaded a few more on there!)

I know some of you are finding it hard that our churches are closed right now—some agree and others have told me how they disagree. I watched the Archbishops of Canterbury and York with Cardinal Nichols address this issue on Ascension Day before their time of prayer in conversation with each other. It is still available to watch on youtube...https://tinyurl.com/yb82gngk TKC prayer.

Also today on Facebook this post has circulated and gone everywhere from the Bishop-elect of the Episcopal Church in the Diocese of Missouri, Deon K. Johnson:

"The work of the church is essential.

The work of caring for the lonely, the marginalized, and the oppressed is essential.

The work of speaking truth to power and seeking justice is essential.

The work of being a loving, liberating, and life giving presence in the world is essential.

The work of welcoming the stranger, the refugee and the undocumented is essential.

The work of reconciliation and healing and caring is essential.

The church does not need to "open" because the church never "closed".

We who make up the Body of Christ, the church, love God and our neighbours and ourselves so much that we will stay away from our buildings until it is safe.

We are the church."

I hope although we are apart you still feel connected as a church, that you find places to pray and communicate with God.

Please do stay safe

The funeral service for David Folkes MBE took place on Saturday 16th May 2020.

There was a procession through Broadway starting at St Michael's Church, Broadway and up Broadway High Street, which due to the number of people lining the street carried until the edge of the village down Leamington road—it was amazing to see how many people came and lined the streets—Thank you. Our thanks to Merstow Green Funeral Home for helping to organise this and to Charlotte Burn Photography for the images of the procession (some of which are below).

LET'S CLAP OUR HANDS

Let's clap our hands
Let's raise the roof
Because here's a simple
Undeniable truth:
We would be in a much worse mess
If it wasn't for the NHS.

They step into places
We won't go,
They wipe the tears
When they start to flow.
They mend, they smile,
They hold, they sew.
They shout 'Push!'
And then they pull
You back into life's Dramatic flow.

Let's give them more, Let's raise their pay Because this is a simple Thing to say:

We would be in a much worse mess If it wasn't for the NHS.

God of compassion,
be close to those who are ill,
afraid or in isolation.
In their loneliness, be their consolation;
in their anxlety, be their hope;
in their darkness, be their light;
through him who suffered alone
on the cross,
but reigns with you in glory,

When someone you know is going through a hard time, don't say "call me if you need anything", rather say:

- I'm doing grocery shopping today, send me your list and I'll drop it off on the way home.
- ◆ I'll fetch your kids from school this week.
- I've made some dinner for you, what time can I drop it off?
- I know you're not OK, tell me how you're feeling about everything.
- I've booked a massage for you, the therapist comes to your house so you don't have to drive.
- I'm taking your kids to the movies so you can have the afternoon off.
- I've got time off this week, what can I do for you and how can I support you?

A Senior's Version of FACEBOOK

For those of my generation who do not, and cannot, comprehend why Facebook exists: I am trying to make friends outside of Facebook while applying the same principles. Therefore, every day I walk down the street and tell passers-by what I have eaten, how I feel at the moment, what I have done the night before, what I will do later and with whom. I give them pictures of my family, my dog and of me gardening, taking things apart in the garage, watering the lawn, standing in front of landmarks, driving around town, having lunch, and doing what anybody and everybody does every day. I also listen to their conversations, give them "thumbs up" and tell them I "like" them. And it works just like Facebook. I already have 4 people following me: 2 police officers, a private investigator and a psychiatrist.

Richard Burridge is with Richard Coles and 12 others.

I am grateful to Paul Roberts for telling me of a rumour that the House of Bishops, continuing their "extreme social distancing" cautionary policy, have asked the Liturgical Commission to change the text of the Gloria in Excelsis to read, "you are seated a minimum of two metres from the right hand of the Father..."

Can we uninstall 2020 and install it again?

Pray For Your Five

Thy Kingdom Come encourages every Christian to pray for five individuals so that they would know God's love for them in Christ.

Saturday after Ascension | Thanks

Pray for your five to recognise the goodness of God in their lives, that they would turn to God in gratitude and trust.

In the life and love we receive from Jesus, there is hope, peace and purpose. It matters that so many don't know this. Let us pray they would.

I wanted to make people aware.... guide dogs haven't been trained in social distancing and queuing to get in a shop. If you see a guide dog heading straight for the shop door and not joining the queue, that is what they have been trained to do. They're not being rude or intentionally queue jumping. Also, if you see them walking down the street, remember, they haven't been trained to social distance, so it is up to us, the sighted people, to give them the space. Hope that helps my many guide dog owner friends in these really difficult and challenging times.

Isolation Day Twelvty three. Wednesday

by Bryn Richards

The period of lockdown is easing but it's still doubtful if we'll be able to holiday abroad so we may be considering 'Staycation.' We are lucky where we live that we can visit some of the wonderful tourist destinations in the surrounding Cotswolds. They are places not only of great beauty but many also have a fascinating history as I've found out.

Morton In Marsh: No-one knows for certain the spot where Colonel Sir Branwell Morton plunged into the swamp as he led the 1st Regiment of Yorkshire Foot in pursuit of King Charles in the latter days of the Civil War. His body was never found and his loyal troops marked the supposed spot with the sign Morton in T'Marsh. The 'T' was stolen as part of a public school prank in 1928.

Bourton: A prosperous village in medieval times, the village became unfortunately separated in the great storm of 1376. The upper part of the village remained "On The Hill' whilst the other section was swept along with the flood and became 'On The Water' some 8 miles away. Geologists estimate the latter part of the village is still on the move and may be forced to change its name to Bourton Sur Mer some time next century.

The Slaughters: These pretty villages were mentioned in the Doomsday Book of 1086 but under the name 'Clapperton.' An enterprising lord of the manor, Sir William Graham saw the opportunity for a village to be a major part of the fledgling television industry and altered the name accordingly. Unfortunately the Berkshire village of Midsomer caught the producer's eye first.

Upper/Lower Swell: The Great Plague of 1665 is well recorded in London but had strange offshoot in the village of Upper Swell. Victims suffered a range of boils bunions and nodules appearing above the waist, especially around the neck. These could grow to a disturbing size before bursting unpleasantly.

The similar affliction that appeared in the neighbouring village of Lower Swell is rarely referred to in polite society.

Isolation day Something or other +3 Thursday

Scientists throughout the world are rapidly searching for a vaccine to rid us of this terrible plague, what have been the cures to terrible plagues in the past?

The Black Death swept Europe in the Middle Ages with no obvious cure. One popular remedy was the Vicary method, to shave the rear end of a live chicken and strap it to the swollen parts of a patient. Remove when either the patient or the chicken are dead.

Rubbing a plague sufferer with the chopped up parts of a dead snake was another popular remedy. Using a live snake meant that the patient was still likely to die but not necessarily of the plague.

Drinking a potion made from ground up unicorn horn was a thought to work if a little expensive. There is no real evidence of success though many doctors were able to afford more up-market homes.

Cures for other illnesses were not always terribly wholesome.

Urine baths were seen as a possible solution to many ailments though the origin of the urine is not always specified. However it was readily available and plentiful and considerably cheaper than unicorn horn.

Tobacco smoke enema was a Native American practice though it continued to be used in Europe until the early 19th Century. You had to no, I'm not going to even think about it!

Unusually for me, I have done a bit of research for this blog and all these "cures" are real. Why not give the NHS an especially loud round of applause this week.

Isolation Day LAST. Friday

So thats it. The lockdown is easing. Garden centres are open, we can exercise non-stop, people are moving back to work. Some of us will shortly be making a return to the bowling green. We can begin to emerge blinking into the bright sunlight of a new day. It's time for the blog to fade with the dawn.

It will take a while for every day life to be up and running again but it is a start. Will we return to normal? I think we may have to redefine what normal is! Who are the most important people in our society? Who are the people who really matter and do we value them enough? Its been a difficult few weeks but if we don't spend some thinking about our values it will have been wasted. However we must first remember. Remember those who have lost, suffered and given so much.

For us on the park, we may have had some difficulties but on the whole we've had great neighbours, a fine place to live and a sense of humour that's carried us through. We looked forward to the Thursday night clap and catch-up. We'll look back on the VE Day celebrations with fond memories. It's been great wandering through a fantastic historical village without throngs of tourists. But I know we need the throngs to get the economy back up to speed. Many of us have managed to go further into the countryside without so much traffic and perhaps become a little closer to nature, surely a good thing.

On a personal level, the blog began as something to pass my time but it took on a life of its own. I really appreciated the comments which have added to, enhanced and improved upon it. Many thanks.

Especial thanks to the wonderful woman I spent all these weeks cooped up with, she put up with so much and kept me sane. Thank you.

I only hope H never finds out!
